Read this paragraph carefully and answer the questions below.

The river flowed quietly through the valley, shining under the golden light of the evening sun. Children played along its banks, while farmers returned home after a long day's work. Among them was a boy named Hamza, who often sat near the river, thinking about his future. He dreamed of becoming a writer and telling stories about his village and its people. He observed everything around him—the sounds of nature, the laughter of children, and the struggles of hardworking villagers. Each day, he wrote his thoughts in a small notebook. Slowly, his words began to take shape, and his dream felt closer than ever before.
